

Around the Coffee Pot...

February 27, 2004

Volume 1, Issue 3

As a substance abuse professional for the past 18 years, I realize the importance of organizations like the Alano Club on a weekly basis. If you've ever tried to help someone get into treatment, you already know the barriers to getting help. Most insurance carriers cover a percentage of inpatient treatment and leave the rest to the individual which can mean thousands of dollars. If you don't have insurance, then you may be eligible for state assisted treatment—if you qualify according to their income criteria. If you don't have insurance and "make too much money", then you are on your own. There is state funded detox programs for men and women regardless of ability to pay—please see page 2 "Need More in Recovery?" If you "are not chronic enough" to warrant a medical detox program, then what do you do? Perhaps you are a veteran and can access, Veterans's services. Perhaps you are

Why are self-help groups important?

An editorial comment by Scott Kelly

Native American, maybe you can receive help through your local tribal affiliation. There are some programs through Department of Corrections that may make a person eligible due to legal history. If you get so overwhelmed with this process and become so depressed due to your addiction and ongoing frustrations at getting help, you may try calling Community Mental Health only to discover that they would really like you to address your substance abuse issues before they will authorize payment for mental health services. If you have a co-occurring disorder (mental health diagnosis in addition to chemical dependency) and want to get help for your mental health issues, you may be encouraged by substance abuse programs to address the mental health issues prior to receiving treatment. At this time, there are no "co-occurring disorder specific programs" in the state of Michigan. This is managed care at its worst, and part of the reason many substance abuse programs across the state are closing. If you are successful in getting into inpatient, residential or outpatient counseling, then what? Where do you go for ongoing aftercare counseling or continuing care? To fully recover from chemical dependency, we are talking years of assistance. For the cost of a six pack, you can access several times per week what has been the most effective treatment for addiction for nearly 70 years—12 step self-help groups.

Before you give up due to the frustrations of trying to get help, please call for assistance in navigating through the mess. There is help available and there are individuals who will help you work through the system to get the help you need. With all of these "realities" of the helping systems, participation in self-help groups can be a saving grace for many people. One of the strong points of self-help groups involves the encouragement to fully recover—not just abstain from the compulsive behavior. Through ongoing support from caring and understanding individuals, millions of people have overcome the damage of their addictive behavior and created a life filled with purpose and meaning through their involvement in self-help groups. The reduction in health problems and social problems combined with the increased productivity at work, attention given to families in parenting and relationships with spouses, along with community involvement and positive role modeling are indisputable!

How many treatment programs can give you a list of promises that will eventually come to fruition in your life?

The "Serenity House - Alano Club of Charlevoix, Inc." was organized in 1986 to provide a meeting place for 12 step meetings. The organization is a non-profit corporation governed by a Board of Directors elected from its membership.

Club membership is never required and should never be implied for participation in 12 step meetings held at the club.

We request each group to organize itself as suggested through their respective 12 step program to avoid any violation of their traditions.

The Alano Club is a group of people interested in helping those seeking relief from addiction related problems by providing a place for 12 step meetings to be held.
